DETAILED ACTION

Drawings

1. The drawings filed on 15 August 2001 are acceptable subject to correction of the informalities indicated on the attached "Notice of Draftsperson's Patent Drawing Review," PTO-
5 948. In order to avoid abandonment of this application, correction is required in reply to the Office action. The correction will not be held in abeyance.

Claim Rejections - 35 U.S.C. § 112

2. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. § 112:

10 The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

3. Claim 10 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

15 Line 1 of claim 10 recites "The method of claim 9..." which is unclear and confusing because claim 9 does not recite a method. Claim 9 is directed towards "An authenticatable digital image..." so that it is unclear what method is referred to and further modified by the additional language of claim 10.

Claim Rejections - 35 U.S.C. § 101

- 20 4. 35 U.S.C. § 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

- 25 5. Claim 9 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claim 9 is directed towards a digital image, which is a set of digital data or descriptive material. Such descriptive material is only statutory if it is both functional and recited as embodied on a computer-readable storage medium (M.P.E.P. § 2106). Descriptive material is considered functional if it imparts functionality on a general purpose computer system when resident therein. Computer programs and specific data structures are examples of functional descriptive material. In this case, the digital image does not impart any functionality upon a general purpose computer, so the claimed digital image is not directed towards functional descriptive material. As discussed in M.P.E.P. § 2106, non-functional descriptive material is never statutory. However, even if the digital image defined by claim 9 were considered functional, it is not recited as being embodied in a computer readable storage medium, so that the claimed image would still be considered directed towards non-statutory subject matter.

It is suggested that amending claim 9 to recite a method of creating or using the authenticatable digital image might resolve both the issue of statutory subject matter under 35 U.S.C. § 101 and the rejection of claim 10 under 35 U.S.C. § 112, second paragraph, above.

Allowable Subject Matter

6. Claims 1-8 are allowed.

7. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:
None of the prior art teaches or suggests the claimed invention. While De Strycker et al. teaches determining a visual model of the cover image to derive a carrier for information to be embedded into the image, this analysis is performed on the image rather than the receiver on which the image is to be placed. De Strycker et al. does not suggest determining information related to a physical characteristic of the receiver, as required by the claims. Smith teaches determining information related to a physical characteristic of a receiver, but uses this information to generate a hash value that is used as part of the embedded content information. Smith fails to suggest that the information related to a physical characteristic of a receiver be used to provide a carrier that is used with a second carrier that is randomly generated, as claimed. Therefore, the claimed invention is allowable over the prior art.

Conclusion

8. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The cited references teach various techniques for generating carriers for content to be embedded into an image, but none teaches providing a carrier formed from information related to a physical characteristic of a receiver.
